
A Centralized Security Network for Substation Monitoring

A centralized security system serving over 150 substations adopted Moxa's PoE switches to carry power, video, command and voice data over Ethernet

A national power grid located in the desert planned to deploy a centralized security system to connect more than 150 substations and consolidate management of multiple security systems?video surveillance, physical access control, and IP phone systems?within a single room.